Stop or Go?

Help your child learn about street safety with this activity that will help him decide if he should stop or go. You will need a red crayon and a green crayon. Ask the child what she should do before crossing a street (look both ways twice). Then, explain that each of the boxes represents what she will see when she looks and that she must decide whether to cross the street or wait. For each image where the child should wait to cross the street, the box should be colored red. If it is safe to cross the street, the box can be colored green.
